I like noise rock and grindcore but noisecore is a hybrid genre that nobody really needed. The Locust is okay I guess

I used to have a shirt of this album until my friend's sister stole it. Lobster Mage is his best album imo. Nice to see Yatagarasu getting appreciation though. I saw him live a couple times. All the music except the noise comes from a NES, and the noise comes from guitar effects pedals he set up on the floor and would turn on and off with his hands. You might like the band he played guitar and sing in, Femoral, and an old '3-pop' cybergrind thing he did, Bishonen Idolpop Genocaut (only the soundclick page remains as far as I can tell. I also recommend Thing-Worker, Watabou, Iamemor, Bubblegum Octopus, Gluk, and Horse The Band, and Fork Sister.

These aren't "noisecore" though they're just stuff that sounds similar. Maybe also check out cutting pink with knives, melt-banana, an albatross, and the locust)

* Correction. He also used a drum machine at least on some of his material.
